U.S. Per Capita Seafood Consumption

The annual data on U.S. per capita seafood consumption published by NOAA Fisheries are shown in the figure below. Recently, the top 10 seafood species consumed in the U.S. are shrimp, tuna, salmon, tilapia, pollock, pangasius, cod, catfish, crabs and scallops. More than 90 percent of these seafood products consisted of seafood caught and cultured in foreign countries. U.S. commercial landings averaged about 4.8 percent of world commercial landings since 1990. Since 1990 up to the present, U.S. aquaculture production continued to decline from two percent to less than one-half percent of world aquaculture production.
